TOGETHER FIRST
A global system that works for all

Is form complete:	Organisation name:	Is organisation?
Yes	Yasseh Teimory	Yes
Climate change Ecosystem collapse	Institutions that lack inclusivity or accountability	Short
Global catastrophic risks mitigated	Risk multipliers managed	Implementation timeframe

Our international institutions are made up of sovereign states. As such they are rarely able to hold states to account. And yet so many of the global problems we face are the result of state action. How can a system designed by states hold states to account? This question is particularly pressing when it comes to threats to the very fabric of our ecosystem itself - our planetary boundaries.

[illegible] a network of civil society organisations working on the issue.

[illegible] mechanisms, including internal oversight and auditing, can further add value here.

[illegible] develop the idea of meaningful international legal frameworks, and are then targeting upcoming events such as the 2021 UN Environmental Assembly in Nairobi and the 2022 50th anniversary commemorations of the founding of the UN Environment programme as hooks to promote the idea.