Richard	Anonymous	No
The threat from new and emerging technology	Lack of multilateralism, inclusivity or accountability	Medium
Global catastrophic risks mitigated	Risk multipliers managed	Implementation timeframe

A model design of the UN sovereignty. This can be created if member states surrender certain parts of their national sovereignty. The sovereignty of the UN should be limited to affairs of mankind. For this, the affairs of mankind would have to be clearly defined and incorporated into international law in decisions of the General Assembly. I have published an introductory website on this subject:

https://affairsofmankind.jimdofree.com/

https://mondialists.jimdofree.com/

Of course, governments will initially reject and try to block a decision in the General Assembly. What matters here is that logical concepts are developed as to how UN sovereignty is to be exercised. It must be explained how UN sovereignty relieves states and what advantages it offers them. First of all, we must concentrate on those states that are willing or do not show any great resistance.